

Real... or not?

Thank you for staying with us so far!

There is something important we need to reveal... In the previous phase, you were shown conversations with interaction partners who were presented as AI chatbots or real people.

We randomly assigned the appearance of these conversations to look like AI-human interactions or human-human interactions. Therefore, some conversations may not have been presented in their correct form.

For example: an interaction presented to you in the form of a conversation with an artificial agent (e.g. ChatGPT) may have actually been an interaction between two humans.

In this final phase, we want you to try to identify the correct category of each image. We will briefly present all the conversations once more, followed by one question about whether you think the interaction partner was a human or an artificial agent.

Sometimes, it is hard to tell, but don't overthink it and go with your gut feeling. At the end, we will tell you if you were correct or wrong!
